ТӨЛУ 021 Berkhiin Jas/Khoural (Rinchen 383:Berkhiin Khoural (Ar tolgodin Khoural)

Current situation

What appear to be the ruins of Berkhiin Jas lie in the Berkh area of Lun Soum near the Tuul River. They lie on the southern side of the valley at the foot of the hill named 'Gub Tolgoi'. The remains consist of two relatively big rectangular stone platforms or temple foundations, which are parallel to each other and 8 metres apart: one measured 12 metres by about 5.10 m with what appears to be an entrance in the western wall i.e. in the South direction; the second measured 10.60 metres by 6metres. There is a smaller squarish structure, possibly the remains of a suburgan / stupa, over 10 metres away from the eastern side of the front platform. Elevation of the site: 991 m

A little further to the East/Southeast from this site, on the way to Bor Khoendii, there is a big owoo at the entrance of a wide valley. (The age of this structure was not determined.) Nearby, there are several round structures: two are on the southeast of a small road: and two, together with a rectangular structure, are to the East on the other side of the road. There is a big hill to the southwest. The source and other local people said that the structures close to the owoo are all graves.

Elevation of the round-shaped structures close to the big owoo: 1028 m.
